FROM THE SHRF BOARD

For several years now SHRF has been involved in an annual Olympics in Pinellas County and many of us long time SHRFers look forward to the event with great anticipation.

Of course, SHRF adoptees are always there; and, although it's disappointing to me that I can't meet them all, the fact that the numbers of former SHRF dogs in attendance keeps increasing makes me so happy. We also get to meet or reacquaint ourselves with many friends of the rescue who bring their Sibes along for a day of fun.

As is always the case, this year's Olympics was outstanding, and I hope you enjoy seeing some of the pictures in this edition of the newsletter. Our thanks go out to our hard working Olympics organizers, President, Peggy Wright and Events Coordinator, Celeste Moore, not to mention the dozens of volunteers who participated to make the Olympics a great day!

Yes folks, it's hard to believe; but SHRF has entered into yet one more year of service to Siberian Huskies. We've been around 8 1/2 yrs now; and certainly hope we can continue to be here for the furballs for a while longer. We take it one day at a time and always will; since we continue to face a shortage of fosters and volunteers to take leadership roles.

No rescue 'job' can be guaranteed a picnic, but in the long run, there are rewards. Somedays, for instance, it's just that 'one more' success story about a dog that would not have made it without SHRF's help that lifts your spirits.

Also, before I close, as you all are probably hearing in the media, more and more people are suffering from an economy that some are predicting may turn into a recession; and pets are already being affected as shelters fill up with animals whose owners can no longer care for them. So, please say a prayer for SHRF and any and all animal organizations that will most likely be asked to help if tough times do materialize.

From the Editors
Bob & Lorraine

On February 2, 2008, our old girl, Nikita, passed over the Rainbow Bridge. She was twelve days shy of her 17th birthday. The Apollo Pack (and I'm including Lorraine and myself) misses her. The dogs, especially Sasha (the next oldest), indicated their awareness of the pack's loss with a few quiet days, a lack of interest in their food and a general malaise. But, after a few days they were up and about with their old appreciation of all that surrounds them. They were no longer mournful but matter-of-factly understanding of the ways of nature. Their strength of character in accepting life's changes is really astounding to observe.

I'm sure the intelligentsia of this world would just shrug off as nonsense that a dog can feel a sense of loss or indicate acceptance. That is supposedly reserved for the higher species, us. I think those of us who actually live under pack circumstances, part of a group that interacts day and night, with all of the interdependencies that derive therefrom, know better.

I may be labeling myself as some kind of heartless nut but I have a good bit more trouble accepting the death of any of my dogs than family members and friends that I have lost over the years. It seems that under those circumstances I am more able to accept the inevitability of death as a part of life. Somehow, though, I can't find that acceptance when it comes to my dogs. Actually, not just my dogs, any dog.

I can't watch a dog get hurt in a movie. I was apoplectic in the movie audience during "8 Below" when the idiot dog trainer left the dogs behind while the humans evacuated Antarctica. I got teary eyed when old Jack ceased trying to get loose from his chains and just gave up and laid down to die. I was furious when the trainer took so long to return to get them. Need I say that I did not enjoy the movie? I would rather sit and watch ninety minutes of Huskies rollicking and playing in the snow without any human drama added.

I also can no longer watch those Animal Cops or Animal Precinct shows on the Animal Planet TV channel. After seeing what some of those people do to their animals, especially dogs, I keep wishing they suffer horribly for it. I know that I'm lucky I never became an Animal Control Officer because I'd now be serving a life sentence somewhere.

This acceptance problem of mine does not apply to other animals either. While I would never intentionally hurt a cat, or a bird or any other domesticated animal, I am able to accept their demise with dry eyes. I feel sorry when I see nature run its course when the lion takes down the water buffalo, it's brutal but it's nature's way. Not so with dogs.

There's something about dogs in general and my Huskies in particular that makes me think they should live forever. Nothing bad should ever happen to them. They should always be free to run, play, eat and sleep, never to grow old, or hungry, or infirm. I know many people will think I'm nuts but that doesn't make me wrong.

When your animal dies

The bond that we form with animals is unique. The loss of an animal can have an impact on you that is as great or even greater than the loss of a family member or friend. This bond is what makes our interactions with animals rich and rewarding, but also what makes the grief process so complicated.

After your animal has died or been lost, it is natural and normal to feel grief and sorrow. Although grief is an internal and private response, there are certain stages of grief that most people experience. By understanding the process, you will be better prepared to manage your grief and to help other family members and friends who share your sense of loss.

The stages of grief

There are many stages of grief, but not everyone experiences them all or in the same order. You may experience denial, anger, guilt, depression, acceptance, and resolution.

Your first reaction may be denial - denial that the animal has died or that death is imminent. Denial may begin when you first learn the seriousness of your animal's illness or injuries. Often, the more sudden the death, the more difficult the loss is to accept.

Anger and guilt often follow denial. Your anger may be directed toward people you normally love and respect, including your family and your veterinarian. People coping with death will often say things that they do not really mean, perhaps hurting those whom they do not mean to hurt. You may feel guilty or blame others for not recognizing the illness earlier, for not doing something sooner, for not being able to afford other types of or further treatment, or for being careless and allowing the animal to be injured.

Depression is also part of the range of emotions experienced after the death of a special animal. The tears flow, there are knots in your stomach, and you feel drained of all your energy. Day-to-day tasks can seem impossible to perform. Sometimes you may even ask yourself if you can go on without the animal. The answer is yes, but there are times when special assistance may be helpful in dealing with your loss.

Eventually, you will come to terms with your feelings. You can begin to resolve and accept your animal's death. Even when you have reached resolution and acceptance, feelings of anger, denial, guilt, and depression may reappear. If this does happen, these feelings will usually be less intense, and with time will be replaced with fond memories.

Although the stages of grief apply fairly universally, grieving is always a personal process. Some people take longer than others to come to terms with denial, anger, guilt, and depression, and each loss is different. If you understand that these are normal reactions, you will be better prepared to cope with your feelings and to help others face theirs. Family and friends should be reassured that sorrow and grief are normal and natural responses to death.

They may not understand

Sometimes well-meaning family and friends may not realize how important your animal was to you or the intensity of your grief. Comments they make may seem cruel and uncaring. Be honest with yourself and others about how you feel. If despair mounts, talk to someone who will listen to your feelings about the loss of your animal. Talk about your sorrow, but also about the fun times you and the animal spent together, the activities you enjoyed, and the memories that are meaningful.

The hurt is so deep

If you or a family member have great difficulty in accepting your animal's death and cannot resolve feelings of grief and sorrow, you may want to discuss these feelings with a person who is trained to understand the grieving process. Your veterinarian certainly understands the relationship you have lost and may be able to suggest support groups and hot lines, grief counselors, clergymen, social workers, physicians, or psychologists who can help.

Should I get another animal?

The death of an animal can upset you emotionally, especially when euthanasia is involved. Some people may feel they would never want another animal. For others, a new animal may help them recover from their loss more quickly. Just as grief is a personal experience, the decision of when, if ever, to bring a new animal into your life is a personal one. If a family member is having difficulty accepting the animal's death, getting a new animal before that person has resolved his or her grief may imply that the life of the deceased animal was unworthy of the grief that is still being felt. Family members should agree on the appropriate time to acquire a new animal. Although you can never replace the animal you lost, you can obtain another to share your life.

Remembering your animal

The period from birth to old age is much shorter for most domestic animals than for people. Death is part of the lifecycle. It cannot be avoided, but understanding and compassion can help you, your family, and your friends manage the grief associated with it. Try to recall and treasure the good times you spent with your animal. You may also wish to establish a memorial of some type or contribute to a charity in honor of your animal.

SHRF RESCUE VOLUNTEER OF THE QUARTER!!!!....

SHRF is proud to announce our Volunteer of The 1st Quarter, 2008

Sally W

Sally came on board as a Volunteer a little over a year ago after adopting from us. Since then she has become very involved and helpful. She actually created and now maintains our SHRF Transport Team. Without her guidance in the transport area we'd never be able to accomplish all of the across the state road trips that are required.

Sally is also one of our top Swashbucklers, calling back and giving guidance and advice to our many answering machine callers. More than one caller has let SHRF know what an asset she is to this team.

Also an excellent Home Inspector for the Rescue, Sally really has that good intuition about potential adopters and knows all the right questions to ask to insure that our rescued furballs are going to their right, forever home.

Just recently, Sally has jumped right in to fill a void in our adoption and foster application department and is doing a fantastic job interviewing applicants and delegating reference checks and Vet checks to other volunteers. Just when we needed her, Sally has come through and saved the day! Words can't thank her enough.

Sally is now the proud Mom to two SHRF rescued dogs, Maya and Halo, so she knows exactly what it takes to be a qualified adopter. This experience has helped her quickly learn the SHRF procedures and help us find some wonderful adopters.

Sally stays very active, helping out at as many SHRF events and fundraisers as she can and doing transports and still being able to balance it all with a full time job! "Wonder Woman" aptly describes our Sally and everyone at SHRF is proud to have her on our team!

Thank you Sally and CONGRATS!

Miami Cop Charged in Dog Death

Mar 10 12:06 PM US/Eastern

MIAMI (AP) - A Miami police officer surrendered Monday to face animal cruelty and other charges in the death of his K-9 partner, a female bloodhound named Dynasty.

Officer Rondal Laroy Brown, 48, will be released on bail, his attorney said. An investigation showed that Dynasty, who was donated to the Miami Police Department in 2004 and specialized in finding missing people, was in good health in January 2007 and weighed 66 pounds. In November when she died, the 4-year-old dog weighed only 33 pounds, had sunken eyes and missing hair, and had a wound on one paw.

Brown reported the dog had died on Nov. 30 and told a supervisor she had gotten loose and may have eaten some rat poison at a nearby construction site. But a necropsy revealed Dynasty suffered from severe malnutrition and dehydration.

Brown has worked at the Miami Police Department since 1987 mostly with dogs. His attorney, Bill Matthewman, said Brown is innocent and would never hurt a dog.

"The allegations are utter and complete nonsense," Matthewman said. The case is the second involving K-9 cruelty allegations in the Miami area recently.

A Miami-Dade County police sergeant, Allen Cockfield, is awaiting trial on charges of animal cruelty and killing a police dog, both felonies. Cockfield has pleaded innocent to kicking to death his assigned German shepherd, Duke.

An Aesop Fable: The Dog and the Shadow

It happened that a Dog had got a piece of meat and was carrying it home in his mouth to eat it in peace. Now on his way home he had to cross a plank lying across a running brook. As he crossed, he looked down and saw his own shadow reflected in the water beneath. Thinking it was another dog with another piece of meat, he made up his mind to have that also. So he made a snap at the shadow in the water, but as he opened his mouth the piece of meat fell out, dropped into the water and was never seen more.

Beware lest you lose the substance by grasping at the shadow

THE BEST PLACE TO BURY A DOG

"There is one best place to bury a dog.

"If you bury him in this spot, he will come to you when you call - come to you over the grim, dim frontier of death, and down the well-remembered path, and to your side again.

"And though you call a dozen living dogs to heel, they shall not growl at him, nor resent his coming, for he belongs there.

"People may scoff at you, who see no lightest blade of grass bent by his footfall, who hear no whimper, people who may never really have had a dog.

Smile at them, for you shall know something that is hidden from them, and which is well worth the knowing.

"The one best place to bury a good dog is in the heart of his master."

--- Ben Hur Lampman ---
from the Portland Oregonian Sept. 11, 1925

LUCKY ADOPTERS

Comments from some people lucky enough to have adopted one of our SHRF dogs.

Meka (formerly Koya). I love it here, especially when it gets cold and it snows. My best friend is Emma, a German Shepard Bill and Paula adopted from the Toronto humane society a couple of years ago. Bill and Paula don't know what I had to go through with my previous owners so they kindly give me a lot of slack. I am continuing to come out of my shell but I know I am in my forever home, and thankful to be here. Well, I have to go now, daddy's going to take me and Emma for a walk.

It's now over a year since we adopted Kenai. He has settled in well to the family, is very comfortable and no longer has to be crated when we leave. He's a happy boy and always greets us at the door with a smile. He adored his Christmas where Santa brought him toys and a huge bone. He also took care of the Christmas ham bone and made sure he took care of his Christmas doggie cookies. This is his first Christmas picture with Santa where he showed off his adorable baby blues. When we took him to the mall everyone stopped to pet him and were so interested in the breed. We always get the "look a sled dog" or "look there is a wolf". He gets so much attention wherever he goes, and he does not mind it at all.

Juneau (formerly Milan) is a gem. We took her on a sponsored walk and then breakfast. She was so well behaved. She has settled in well and is displaying her own personality. She's growing so fast I can't give her enough food. She is a dog vacuum cleaner - I have to watch her like a hawk as she loves all sorts of stuff from the garden. She gets on well with her new pack members, Sascha and Kodiak. Of course we are spoiling her, can't help it.

What a joy it's been getting to know Miss Pandora! We've never had such a warm and friendly rescue pet right out of the gate. She constantly amazes us with her inquisitive spirit and sense of adventure. We took her on a recent camping trip and what a success. Now she can't wait for our summer adventure into New England and Canada. There isn't a person we meet who isn't awed by her beauty – but as Husky owners – we are used to that! We can't thank the rescue enough for the care they provided and the match they made for us!

P.S. She sleeps in the strangest position we've ever seen...

Much ado about doo. Snohomish County spends $475k to educate the public on pooch poop

Everett Herald story about 126,000 dogs in Snohomish County that create the sewage equivalent of 32,000 humans, and what government is doing about it.

"This is essentially the equivalent of the human waste of the city of Lynnwood or Bothell dumped in back yards every day," said Kathy Thornburgh, a county water and habitat sciences supervisor.

It's a big problem that county officials have spent four years studying. Clean water experts say streams are suffering whenever a dog's business isn't cleaned up, and the county is wrapping up a $475,000 campaign on how to solve the problem.

So far, officials spent some of the money trying to block animal waste from running into county streams.

Other money is being spent on education and on study and experimentation to find the right way to persuade homeowners with pets to "scoop the poop, bag it and put it in the trash."

Last week, the county approved a final $15,000 contract for a phone survey to find out if dog owners are remembering the county's message.

If people are changing their ways, "we'll start to see declines in bacteria contamination in streams. That's the point of all this," said Dave Ward, a county watershed expert.

It's an important topic. It's also one in which county government must tread carefully, Ward said. So clean water specialists asked a group of people to help choose the best euphemisms for droppings, to plop their message on official posters and mailings.

Out of a hundred possibilities, they laughed too much at "land mines," "poodle patties" and "jobbers," which didn't seem appropriate for serious government communications.

"Manure" was too agricultural, "Tootsie Rolls" would rile copyright lawyers, and "stool" and "fecal" matter were too medical, too technical.

"We ended up with 'poop,'" Ward said. "It was a funny exercise. We're just trying to use language that people are comfortable with so the message doesn't get tuned out."

FOUR FEET

I have done mostly what men do,
And pushed it out of my mind;
But I can't forget, if I wanted to,
Four-Foot trotting behind.

Day after day, the whole day through-- Wherever my road inclined--

Four-Foot said, 'I am coming with you!'
And trotted along behind.

Now I must go by some other round--
Which I shall never find--
Somewhere that does not carry the sound
Of Four-Foot trotting behind.

--- Rudyard Kipling ---

Dog Myths

Forget what you think you know about canine health & behavior.

by Marry Sorensen

Dogs see only in black and white

Seeing the world through your dog's eyes is not as simple as renting an old black-and-white movie. The canine eye contains a variety of photoreceptors, or light detectors, that allow the animal to see. Some are shaped like rods, some like cones. Cone-shaped photoreceptors are the basis for color vision. Because dogs' eyes have significantly more rods than cones, researchers once believed dogs saw only in black and white. Research conducted in the 1980s at the University of California at Santa Barbara indicated otherwise: The studies revealed dogs could distinguish between a red ball and a blue ball, white light and colored lights, and closely related hues of violet and blue. They cannot make a distinction between colors from greenish yellow through orange and red. As more research is done, our limited understanding of canine vision is sure to shift again.

SPECIAL HUSKY EVENTS

Get Rescued in Gulfport 2008 Festival Saturday, March 1, 2008

Here are some pictures of the "Get Rescued in Gulfport" event. Thank you to everyone that attended; George, Charlene and Mark, Carolyn D., Ginger, Amy F., Lou and Dawn, Chris R., and Sheva's (now Sara) new Mom, Cathy. We couldn't have done it without all of you, and it wouldn't have been as much fun!

It was a great event with a lot of other rescues, the day was beautiful, there was music playing and a lot of great dogs. We made money selling things and we had a couple of people that sounded like they were serious about fostering or adopting. All in all it was a very good time. I hope we can do it again next year.

Enjoy the pictures,
Thanks again,

Celeste

You know you're a dog person when...

You meet other people with dogs, and remember their dog's call name after 30 seconds, but don't get the owner/handler's name until you've met them 2 or 3 times.
